Hmm well, well, I'm not there (or at least I can't find it) ... thank you Chris! Spice (1) FlagReport .A" was this post useful? (I have an Enterprise Visual Studio account.) @Mike: thanks that .A is possible to remove all editions from ISO, except one? Click on the Info link for that ISO and you will receive a list of which editions are in it. Any link I could post would be as useless to you as would my Visual Studio subscription page that requires a valid subscription (password) to log in. That site needs a major fix. * Correction * That process updated ... Prover2 and will see2 if you upgrade ! Thank you. Someone knows when Windows 10 Enterprise 1709 ISO will be available on My.VisualStudio.com? Then you should not worry about this .Edit: No, I'm wrong. If you use the Microsoft Media .A" authoring tool, you can obtain a drive Bootable USB with more' operating system versions.https://www.microsoft.com/en-us/software-download/Windows10 we will use MDT to distribute OS.So When we start a workstation, my guess .A" which will show different versions of Windows 10 (home, enterprise etc.) And we choose the version. We don't want us not to need to distribute only the enterprise version araviglinche wrote: We will use MDT to deploy the operating system. You right? Yes. See the blog post I mentioned above: So it looks like there are two WIM images. One for the volume license and one for non-voluminous licenses. Using the Mediaprogram tool you get the non-volume license image that includes the house and also at home n. :) Forgotten to mention, they rolled them all in two ISOs. .A Version 1709 .A" an update, in which Enterprise .A" an edition. My apologies. Ah I see - they used to call it "Windows 10 Enterprise" and now they call it "Windows 10 VL". Then you shouldn't have to worry about it. Spice (2) flagReport Was this post helpful? This solution looks promising, I will try that and get backSo if we install ISO on VM with particular edition and capture it, while deploying it wont show other editions. It's there, type Windows 10 in the search box and it should show up. I wasn't aware that it does Home and Home N.A .A Thx .A Mike400 .A Spice (2) flagReport Was this post helpful? OP is talking about the laundry list of editions when you do a clean install of v1709 .A This list includes:Windows 10 HomeWindows 10N HomeWindows 10 EduWindows 10N EduWindows 10 ProWindows 10N Prof didn't scroll down past the above list but there are a couple more on this list - I suspect they're Windows 10(N) Ent.A This is on a bootable DVD made from the ISO downloaded via the v1709 media creation tool. I seem to remember the Enterprise ISO for 1703 being released later than the Professional version too... thumb up thumb down :A .A The process is updated with v1709, so we'll let it slide this one time. thumb up thumb down Mike400 wrote: Chris (Microsoft) wrote: tkr99 wrote: @Mike: Thanks is that possible to remove Editions from ISO, except one? thumb up thumb down You're talking about Windows 10 media from VLSC: .A Windows 10, version 1709 coming soon?
